This is a program of the Gildenhorn/Speisman Center for the Arts.

Loss and Beauty: Creating Solace in a Land of Infinite Sorrow, is a collection of images about the nature of personal journeys during the Nazi Holocaust. The images are unique in the world of creativity and expression that has come from the experience of the Holocaust. Composites of my original photographs express the relationship between home and final resting place and the journeys, psychological and physical, that were undertaken. The photographs offer a mirror for us to imagine victim and aggressor simultaneously.
